

James Zimmerman Quoted in The Washington Post—In China's Words, It's Open for Business. In Actions, Not So Much

James Zimmerman was quoted in "In China's Words, It's Open for Business. In Actions, Not So Much," an article in The Washington Post,* regarding the China Minister's U.S. visit to rekindle business with a highly skeptical Washington.

"A day doesn't go by without some news about how the U.S. and China are constantly in a state of needling one another over the issue of the day," said James Zimmerman, a partner in the Beijing office of Perkins Coie LLP and former chairman of the American Chamber of Commerce in China. "In the ever-changing current environment, businesses on the ground in China are constantly revising their strategic plans, tearing them up and starting over again."

Read the full article on *The Washington Post*.*

*Subscription-based publication

Contact

James M. Zimmerman

Partner

JZimmerman@perkinscoie.com 86.10.5971.9388