

The Earth's climate is changing.

This article discusses whether this is a risk that can, and should, be covered by insurance. Few coverage cases to date have addressed the issue, but that could change as underlying climate change suits are filed, including by young people who face an uncertain future. This article also highlights some of the public policy issues that might come into play, given the global importance of the underlying issue.

Click here to read the full article on the *American Bar Association website.

*Subscription-based publication

Authors

Karin Scherner Aldama

Partner

KAldama@perkinscoie.com 602.351.8270

Explore more in

Insurance Recovery Law