

Remotely Persuasive: Litigating in Unusual Times

Consistent with the gradual phase-based governmental plans for returning our communities to the new COVID-19 normal, trial lawyers have adapted in phases—from transitioning to remote work (Phase One), to learning how to use remote litigation technology (Phase Two), and now to Phase Three, in which we're actually using that technology.

We shift now to Phase Four, in which trial lawyers are not just using the technology but using it effectively and persuasively.

Click here to read the full article.

Authors

Jessica L. Everett-Garcia

Partner

JEverettGarcia@perkinscoie.com 602.351.8165

Karen O. Lisko

Business Professional

KLisko@perkinscoie.com 602.351.8225

Geoffrey A. Vance

Partner

GVance@perkinscoie.com 312.324.8477

Explore more in

E-Discovery Services & Strategy