

What FDA Warning Letters Signal About Delta-8 Enforcement

On May 4, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration issued new warning letters to five companies selling products containing Delta-8 THC, an intoxicating cannabinoid derived from hemp, according to the *Law360 article. In announcing the warning letters, the agency advised that "Delta-8 THC has psychoactive and intoxicating effects and may be dangerous to consumers."

The FDA's recent action reflects swirling debates over Delta-8 THC at the federal and state levels. Many hemp advocates claim the cannabinoid is federally legal, while consumer protection advocates feverishly disagree.

*Subscription-based publication

Click here to read the full article.

Authors

Barak Cohen

Partner

BCohen@perkinscoie.com 202.654.6337

Andrew J. Kline

Senior Counsel

AKline@perkinscoie.com 303.291.2307

Thomas (Tommy) Tobin

Counsel

TTobin@perkinscoie.com 206.359.3157

Explore more in

Cannabis Law