

Labor Law Today—2020 Year in Review

Perkins Coie is pleased to present the second edition of Labor Law Today—Year in Review, highlighting the past year's most noteworthy developments. These include the following:

- The COVID-19 pandemic and its impact on traditional labor law in 2020
- The National Labor Relations Board's (Board) reversal of several of its predecessors' initiatives, dialing back some of the significant 2014 election rule amendments, joint employer standards, and other expansions of the National Labor Relations Act's (NLRA) scope of protection
- The Board's increased reliance on administrative rulemaking to achieve policy objectives
- What to expect in the year ahead
