

Cannabis companies can find themselves in financial distress but are generally locked out of the federal bankruptcy courts. What are their options? Perkins Coie Associate Tommy Tobin sits down with Billy Organek, program fellow at Harvard Law School's Bankruptcy Project, to discuss the importance of bankruptcy law and options companies can seek outside of the federal bankruptcy process.

Listen to "Distressed Cannabis Companies: Considering Options Amid Bankruptcy Limitations" on Spreaker.

Find us where you get your podcasts

Contributors

Thomas \(Tommy\) Tobin

Counsel

TTobin@perkinscoie.com   206.359.3157

Explore more in

Cannabis Law

Podcast series

The 411 on 420

The cannabis industry's regulatory landscape is complex and continually evolving. The 411 on 420 brings together experts from the cannabis field and our industry attorneys to discuss the business of cannabis and how the legal landscape affects the market. From CEOs to advocates, and CBD to THC, this podcast sheds light on this growing cannabis industry.

View the series