Blogs

March 03, 2023

Day-Rate Rules Result in Overtime Pay for Exempt Highly Compensated Employee

The U.S. Supreme Court recently ruled in Helix Energy Solutions Group v. Hewitt that a daily-rate worker who earned over $200,000 annually was not exempt from the Fair Labor Standards Act's overtime requirements. In an opinion authored by Justice Elena Kagan, the Court held that compensation based on a daily rate did not satisfy the "salary basis test," which is required for an employee to be exempt from overtime compensation. The decision, while specific to day-rate compensation, also applies to exempt employees paid an hourly or shift rate.

Further discussion of the Court's decision and its implications for employers and employees is found here.

Authors

Explore more in

Labor & Employment