

Recently, I blogged about how the corporate secretary wears 21 hats. The first hat that a corporate secretary wears is that they serve as a "jack of all trades."

Okay, right off the bat, I've confused myself. I Googled the definition of "jack of all trades" and it immediately took me to the phrase that includes "master of none." And that's not what I mean.

A corporate secretary can wear many hats and be proficient in most, if not all, of those areas. They're a "master of all," not a master of none. Perhaps the phrase "everything to everyone" is more apt here.

Explore more in

Corporate Law

Blog series

Public Chatter

Public Chatter provides practical guidance—and the latest developments—to those grappling with public company securities law and corporate governance issues, through content developed from an in-house perspective.

Subscribe ?

Visit Public Chatter Resources for Guides, Quick Alerts and Programs

View the blog