

Another in the "newbies" series: It obviously depends on the size and culture of each company, but most larger companies will have a half-dozen or so staffers in the corporate secretary's department, whereas a smaller company likely only has one or two staffers.

In general, the size of the corporate secretary's department has grown over the years as the responsibilities have grown immensely - and the position is garnering the type of respect it deserves. Still, it's often not seen as a "profit center" as most compliance departments are not. If the corporate secretary's department is tasked with some of the fast-growing ESG responsibilities that companies now have, we can expect these departments to be adding staff in the near-term...

Explore more in

Corporate Law

Blog series

Public Chatter

Public Chatter provides practical guidance—and the latest developments—to those grappling with public company securities law and corporate governance issues, through content developed from an in-house perspective.

Subscribe ?

Visit Public Chatter Resources for Guides, Quick Alerts and Programs

View the blog